Two Women Living in a Hollow Tree.

[From the Louisville (Ky.) Courier, January 11.]

A philanthropic gentleman, who lives in the lower part of the city, was on his way out in the country yesterday afternoon, on the old Salt River road, during the driving snow storm, when he discovered a woman crossing the fence into a wood pasture just outside of the city limits. She was thinly clad, shivering in the cruel blast, and gave evidence of severe destitution and hard living. Not seeing any house near, he wondered to himself where the woman was going, and calling her, questioned her as to the cause of her being out in the storm. She replied by evasive answers, but on his questioning her more closely, she told him that she lived with another woman in an old hollow tree in the pasture, and had been staying there for over four months past. The gentleman hitched his horse and proceeded to where the woman designated her miserable retreat to be, and there, wrapped up in some old army blankets, he discovered the other woman, sleeping in the hollow of the tree, sheltered by some old pieces of boards. He awakened the unfortunate woman up and asked her name; she gave it as Jane Hutton. The woman he first met gave her name as Eliza Harris. They said they were from Cross Keys, near Atlanta, Georgia, and had come up to this city some months ago seeking honorable employment, but had failed in their efforts, and had since that time earned a livelihood by gathering shucks, doing washing, &c., meeting misfortune with a heroism worthy of the noblest of women. The gentleman who found them soon made their case known to the people of that vicinity, and in a few hours the poor women were taken from their uncomfortable refuge and well provided for.

THE OPERA HOUSE DRAWING.

HOW IT WILL BE DONE.

THE WHEELS.

Two wheels are [illegible] and revolving on pivots. This form is adopted in order to more thoroughly mix and separate the tickets. The diameter of the large wheel is [illegible] inches, that of the smaller one [illegible] inches. The numbers will occupy about one-third of the larger wheel, leaving ample room to sift and mix them at every revolution.

THE NUMBERS.

Two hundred and ten thousand numbers (from 1 to 210,000 inclusive), representing the certificates issued, will be placed in the large wheel. These numbers are printed on small, white tickets, made of imperial photograph paper, and are as hard and smooth as metallic sheets. The tickets for the small wheel are prepared by writing on small cards the names of the premiums, the Opera House on one, and each of the remaining three hundred and [illegible] premiums on others respectively. These three hundred and two tickets are deposited in the small wheel.

THE DRAWING.

These numbers having been placed in one wheel and the premiums in the other, and the wheels having revolved a sufficient length of time to thoroughly mix them, a number will be drawn from one and a premium ticket from the other, and the holder of that number will become entitled to the premium written on the ticket. It will therefore be seen that the Opera House may be the last premium drawn or the first.

It will be observed that there is a double chance in this method. If your number happens to be one of the three hundred and two drawn from the wheel you get one of the premiums—whether the Opera House or a painting depends upon the ticket drawn from the second wheel.

The wheels are now exhibiting at Kinsley's.

The drawing will take place on Monday next, and will commence at 10 o'clock precisely.
